FRIDAY, MARCH 23, 1906.

When a Grand Jury is packed the most natural question is, Why?

Proper doesn't want an office, but he hasn't said what he would do if forced.

Any Territory that gets Statehood at this session of Congress will have worked hard enough to deserve it.

It is extraordinary for men to preach that the House Rules don't exist when they have cast a very good sized vote at each election.

County Fathers can hardly take the position that the garbage crematory was put up for no other good purpose than to give some contractor a job.

It is known now that bonds can be obtained in the open market, and presumably the name of the company issuing will not effect the magistrate's term of office.

Mrs. Huntington's release from marriage vows again demonstrates that wealth does not guarantee happiness, unless it be in the pleasures that can be figured out of the alimony.

It is well for Hawaii to learn how far the Supreme Court justices can go in framing laws. The fact that it has long been done has not increased the confidence of some citizens as to the wisdom of their semi-legislative handiwork.

Secretary Bonaparte's request for $23,900,000 for the navy immediately gives rise to the query as to how much he really needs. Congress has become so accustomed to cutting down that official estimates are usually made with a view to striking an average.

Unless the Russian radicals are better organized than during their most recent struggle the government to be framed at the assembly in Finland will be decidedly provisional. The distressed condition of the government after the war with Japan gave revolutionists the best opportunity possible. Falling then, Russia must have grown steadily worse for them to have any prospect of success now.

ROOSEVELT'S LITTLE WAR

When a man is looking for strange life he usually gets it. This has been the case with the President during his greater part of his career but never more than at the present time. Responding to the popular demand the President has set out to do things at this session of Congress, and principally to regulate the railroads.

The battle is not finished. It is now passing through its most heated period. The President has been bowled over in his Philippine policy and the Statehood measure stands a chance of becoming lost between the two houses. It will at least be considerably mutilated when it reaches the President for signature.

in the House of Representatives and is under searching and unrelenting investigation in the Senate. More than that, the Senate has definitely decided that hereafter things shall be done differently in Washington and that the President shall consult it in the matter of making treaties, appointing persons to office and digging the Panama canal.

"The visit of the Missouri delegation to the President the other day was a case in point, illustrating the methods being employed to get legislation. The nine Republican members from that State called at the White House with reference to patronage. The President told them that before he talked to them about patronage he would like to discuss Statehood and other administration measures about which the Missourians were reported to be somewhat shaky.

"Then a storm broke loose. The members from Missouri refused to be coerced and said they would vote in the House according to their convictions, even if the President did not make a single appointment for them.

"Similar tactics were pursued with reference to the Philippine bill. The men who opposed the plan of the President and the Secretary of War for free trade with the Philippines in everything but sugar and tobacco, and free trade in these products after 1909, were vigorously described and contemptuous remarks passed upon them by administration spokesmen. It was the application of the 'big stick' policy.

"The men attacked by the President and the President's spokesmen with such vigorous candor have replied in kind. Bitterness has been injected into the various controversies. Even 'Uncle Joe' Cannon has caught the infection and he is swinging the 'big stick' of the administration with a merciless hand and those whose heads have been cracked are preparing to give him as good as he sends."

"This will give Bulletin readers an inkling of why Hawaii's claims for the attention of Congress might not receive speedy action. A tremendous play among the great political and social forces is going on, and as a matter of fact our very important affairs make up a very small detail of national affairs.

It is worthy of note for the edification of our local workers in the scenes of government, that the President in all his efforts has a clearly defined policy and he approaches his task in a consistently straightforward manner. Roosevelt is not a compromise man. He assures himself that he is right and goes ahead. He is never found playing fast and loose with friend or enemy. The people and their representatives in Congress know where to find him. His action at all times is foursquare with his declared purpose. It is difficult to predict the outcome in Congress—the people are with the President—but in any event the contestants will know that they have been in a fight with an honest man as opposed to truckling "diplomacy" of easy and doubtful virtue.

HARTWELL CASE DID NOT APPLY

Juror Excused Because He Was Peters' Client

It is practically beyond doubt that the actual trial of the Johnson murder case will begin on next Monday, or on Tuesday at the very latest. The prosecution has now only one more preliminary challenge left, and it may not use it, as both Attorney General Peters and Prosser this noon expressed their most absolute satisfaction with the jury as it now stands.

"It is the best jury we have had in a murder trial for years," said Peters, and Prosser agreed with him emphatically. The defense has three challenges left, however, so there may still be quite a material change in the make up of the jury. Out of the special venire for twenty-five jurors issued yesterday Deputy Sheriff Kalaketa this morning returned the following eleven as served: Charles W. Booth, Heinrich Gumpfer, J. W. Maguire, Jno. H. Markham, John Neill, Charles H. Pfeiffer, David Notley, O. C. Swain, Bertram von Damm, Julian D. Harris and A. B. Donk. Of these the court excused, Markham, Donk and Neill.

C. W. Booth was the first juror called. He was passed by the prosecution, but challenged for cause by the defense, and excused.

John W. Maguire was called in Booth's place. He was challenged by the prosecution on the ground that he was opposed to the infliction of capital punishment, and was excused, the defense joining in the challenge.

David Notley was passed for cause by both sides, and the court announced a recess of ten minutes. Only about two minutes had elapsed, however, when the jurors were summoned into the box again. Attorney General Peters, who had been before the Supreme Court while Prosser appeared for the Territory in the Johnson case, appeared before the court and said that he desired to make a statement.

Prosser had, he said, come to him and asked him if the jury was satisfactory as it stood. Peters had thought so until he saw that David Notley had been passed for cause. Both Peters and Deputy Attorney General Fleming were attorneys for Notley. He had been out of employment for some time and both had given him financial assistance. He wanted to bring this matter before the attention of the court as these facts might tend to influence the juror.

Harrison stated that he thought that under these circumstances Notley was disqualified.

Judge Robinson asked him if he thought so after the decision of the Supreme Court whereby a Justice had been found to be qualified to hear a case in which he had himself been counsel.

Harrison said that he still thought so, and called attention to the statute whereby Circuit Court judges were disqualified under similar circumstances.

Notley stated that he would rather be excused from sitting as a juror and was excused.

At this point the court took occasion to hand a neat bouquet to Attorney General Peters, who had, however, unfortunately, already left the court room.

"The thanks of the court is due to Attorney General Peters for his action," said the Judge. "He deserves the respect of the court and the community for coming forth with the matter in the manly manner in which he did."

Prosser called attention to the fact that in passing Notley for cause he had not been aware that the relation of client and attorney existed between him and Peters.

O. C. Swain was called in Notley's place and was passed for cause by both the prosecution and the defense. The prosecution waived its fourth preliminary challenge and the defense used its seventh against H. E. Gares. Julian D. Harris was called in his place and passed for cause.

The defense used its eighth preliminary challenge on William Buckle, who was excused. Heinrich Gumpfer was called. He said that although he had been in the country for twenty-four years he was not very well posted in the English language, as he was a native of Germany. He was therefore excused by the court.

C. H. Pfeiffer was called next. He had as a deputy sheriff at one time had some experience with insane persons, whom he had had in his custody, but he did not for that reason consider himself an expert on insanity. He was passed for cause.

The prosecution waived its fifth challenge and Jas. Haughton was excused on the defense's ninth challenge. As the panel was exhausted, Judge Robinson announced that he would at 2 p. m. issue a special venire, the fourth in the case, which would be made returnable for next Monday morning, when the case will be resumed. As the defense has only three challenges left, there is every probability that a jury should be selected by Monday noon.

GREAT WAR DRAMA PROVES A BIG HIT

If the Hawaii Yacht Club gets all that it deserves the benefit series of performances by the Buhler Company of players at the Opera House will wind up with a record of splendid success. The first of the four performance occurred last evening and the Honolulu folks, visitors, tourists and large number of men from the battleship Oregon who attended, went away highly pleased with what they had seen and heard.

"Held by the Enemy" was the play presented by the accomplished Buhlers. It is a play that has inspired thousands throughout the States and it certainly inspired local theatergoers at the Opera House last evening. It is a story of love and war and bravery and sacrifice and, as played by the Buhler people, it stirred the emotions to a great depth. Great enthusiasm was manifested and the crowd, quick to appreciate good acting, was always ready with heartfelt applause.

Richard Buhler as the Union officer whose heart is lost to a beauty of the South, is in every detail the artist with the magic touch that reaches the feelings. Brenda Fowler, as the girl he loves, is winsome, strong, artistic, Auerbach and Juliette Chandler, also playing lovers with opposing sympathies as far as the war is concerned, furnished a fund of delight for which they deserve great credit. Rupert Drum, as the rebel spy, does star work in a particularly exciting scene. To run through the entire list of good players would be to repeat what everybody has seen by this time come to know. You can see this play tomorrow evening and be convinced of its excellence both in plot and playing. The scenery is especially good and the costumes perfect, so that the whole picture is thoroughly satisfying.

Between the acts Ernest Kahl and his pupils furnished music from stringed instruments, music infinitely sweet. The audience went wild with delight, shouting encores and giving Kahl a tremendous ovation.

The Hawaii Yacht Club charmed the people with a most dainty feature in the form of young ladies wearing yachting costumes, to act as ushers.

"Thelma" will be presented at the Opera House tonight and again at the matinee tomorrow. This play is bound to draw big crowds. It has proved one of the most popular ever presented here.

Clarence Macfarlane has been particularly active in helping to make this benefit a success and he deserves great credit. The idea of engaging the popular Buhler players to entertain for the benefit of the Yacht Club was a great inspiration. Those who have the interests of the Club at heart and who admire good plays and entrancing music will crowd the Opera House tonight, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow evening.
